At a well attended meeting of the directors of the New London County Improvement League in the Transportation building on Saturday afternoon at 1.20 o'clock, the executive commitschool for the coming year. Miss May Gibbs, a former substitute teacher at the Norwich Free Academy will be an assistant in the private day school. Miss Gibbs will have charge of the folk dancing spelling readtee were empowered to consider the advisability of securing new quarters school. Miss Gibbs will have charge of the folk dancing, spelling, reading and some of the English work. Her thorough training at Smith college and the Norwich Commercial school equips her well for this work and she is now receiving congratulations from her many friends on her appointment to this excellent position.

The principal of the private day school seems pleased that Superintendent Graham in his report to the school committee advocated promotion.

The county agent F C Karner presented in the league. The meeting mew quarters for the league. The meeting was called to order by President Whitman and the treasurer, Charles I. Smith, reported a balance of $548 in the treasury. In reporting on the membership campaign, Secretary Woodbury O. Rogers reported $250 raised leaving about $100 to be raised before the first of October. Charles A. Hagberg was elected assistant to Trasurer Smith. There was some discussion on the appointment of an asistant to the county agent.

The county agent, F. C. Karner, presented his report as follows:

school committee advocated promotion y subject. This school has been doing this for the past three years. y subject. This school has been doing this for the past three years.

The penmanship work will be in charge of Principal L. M. Crandall of the Norwich Commercial school, and director of commercial education in the Connecticut College for Women. The penmanship period has been arranged so as not to interfere with his other duties.

Mr. Crandall's thorough training at the Zanerian Art College in Columbus, Ohlo, where he was especially prepared for supervising and teaching of penmanship in graded schools fits him well for this important work. In addition to the regular courses prescribed by the state, for this school is under state supervision, there will be offered courses in French, German, folk dancing, knitting, crocheting, basketry, paper sloyds and a course in sewing.

The Norwich Free Academy admits students of this school by certificates.

123 members and each group was given a canning demonstration by Miss M. E. Sprague during the first week of August. Not daunted by the hot weather demonstrations were given every afternoon of the week with an average attendance of 26 at each demonstration. The ladies at Niantic have also requested that a canning demonstration be given at their fair the 28th and 29th of September, and being unable to secure a demonstrator, the county agent will undertake to fill the date and show the women how to work.

The Sewing Club Project closed on Sept. 1, and nine members sent in exhibits for final prizes at the country of the Characteristics. awarderl as follows: Edna Prodell, first prize $5.00, Alice Frazer, second prize $4.09, Ella Springer, third prize $3, Ruth Lappie, fourth prize $2, Henrietta Russell, fifth prize $1. The other club members completing this work will receive medals. Juvenile Judging Project. In accordance with the written project approved by the directors, stating that lessons in stock judging would be given to boys interested during July and August, seven classes were held with an average attendane of nine. Lessons on Holsteins were given in the herds of Mr. F. M. Partello, North Stonington, B. P. Hewitt, Mystic and Director E. A. Hoxie, Lebanon, on Guernseys at Mr. C. B. Lebanon, on Guernseys at Mr. C. B. York's, Stonington, on Jerseys at Mr. T. D. Blight's, Lebanon, and Mr. James Browning, Stonington, and on Ayrshires at Director J. D. Avery's, North Stonington. At the county fair North Stonington. At the county fair Sept. 6, 13 boys entered the contest. Placings were made in three classes only, there being no Holsteins on the grounds. Three contests were necessary to pick the three winners as follows: Benjamin Avery, North Stonington, first prize $5, Alfred Onderdonk, Yantic, second prize $3 and Sidney Moorehouse, North Stonington, third, $2. These three boys will represent New London county at the contest which is to be held at the National Dairy Show in Springfield, Mass., Oct. 13, Mass., Oct. 13.

Exhibit at the County Fair. As practically all of the directors saw our exhibit I will only give a brief review. Demonstrations were given in canning, poultry selection, stock judging, and testing milk for butter fat. Exhibits were made of Boys' and Girls' club work, dairy rations, bees and orchard improvement. One hundred and seventy people left requests for bulletins on various subrequests for bulletins on various sub-jects, besides those receiving bulle-tins at the fair. Six farmers decided to start keeping milk records and 52 brought in samples to be tested for butter fat. Four dairymen requested to be taken into the next cow testing to be taken into the next cow testing association organized. From the in-terest shown in the dairy exhibits, I believe that the time has come for the Farm Bureau to adopt a Dairy Improvement Project covering cow testing work and dairy rations as well as breeding.

The Milk Situation. In this same connection I should like to report on the latest develop-ments in the milk shipping and mar-keting situation. Copies of the Farm Bureau News of Rhode Island may be had giving a detailed report of the Providence market conditions. A meeting was held in Providence on Aug. 12 at which the situation was discussed. Eastern Connecticut was represented by Secretary W. O. Rog-ers, County Agent Kennedy of Windham county, and Prof. Karl Musser of Storrs. It was decided to call a meeting of all milk producers and this meeting was held on Sept. 2 at which time it was decided to organize a Providence Cooperative Marketing Association. I attended a meeting in Providence lost Saturday when the Providence last Saturday when the association was duly organized and plans are being made to start marketing the milk as soon as possible. Windham County Farm Bureau is making a study of where milk is being produced and the best means of getting it to market under the new shipping rates which go into effect Oct. 1. In the western part of the Oct. 1. In the western part of the state, the producers have gotten together and placed the marketing of Franklin on Saturday.

Read Over This List of Items Carefully. It Will Pay You.

Prof. Judkins of Connecticut Agricultural College, followed with a very interesting talk on methods of handling milk. State Leader H. J. Baker spoke of the good work the Farm Bureaus are doing, and the county agent talked on cooperation. All enjoyed the day, and the meeting was well attended, one hundred being present.

Project Reports. The county agent has visited 57 field tests and demonstrations, keeping in touch with the work and making notes. As very little of this work is yet complete, no report will be made other than progress, although the oat tests have all been cut and some thrashed. One farmer became interested in a neighboring oat test with the result that he requested the county agent to measure his field so ounty agent to measure his field so that yield per acre might be obtained for comparison. Measurements and final results will be collected and and that results will be consisted and tabulated soon on the oat, soy bean and corn variety tests.

Rev. L. M. Kenneston of Preston reports that his demonstration orchard is heavily loaded with large, perfect apples, and that he is satisfied that it pays to prune and spray the orchard. The other demonstrates the orchard. The other demonstra-tion orchards will be visited soon and

The Hadlyme Jr., Agricultural club held a meeting on July 14 at which time it was decided to hold a local exhibit but along with other fairs in the state this had to be called off, however, several sent exhibits to the county fair which showed that the club is still doing good work.

Scotland Road Social Club's Clambake Followed By Informal Dance-Rev. Robert Clack, of China, Speaks at First Congregational Church-Schools to Open Today.

The clambake for members of the Scotland Road Social club Saturday afternoon was a great success. The dinner, the getting up of which in-volved a good deal of preparation, was served from 12 to 3 o'clock, by the supper committee. About fifty were present to enjoy clam chowder, steamed clams, fish, lobster, white and steamed clams, fish, lobster, white and sweet potatoes, corn, and various side dishes, watermelon and lemonade. Not the least part of the good time was the novelty of cooking the dinner in the basement and the merry hour spent in getting together the elaborate menu. Later there was a few square dances, Prof. E. L. Tinkham of Hanover, acting as prompter. Hanover, acting as prompter.
